Career development in investment management requires a wide set of skills and competencies, which may be particularly important in conditions of financial turmoil. As a result, the premium for education continues to rise and lifelong learning become essential.

The current financial crisis and the evolution in the regulatory framework is making it harder to identify the short and medium-term effects on career opportunities in investment management and in the requirements for a professional in the field of portfolio management, private banking and wealth management, research and valuation.

The speakers will bring their experience and insights on the career perspectives in the industry in this event which is jointly organized by Università Bocconi and by the Italian CFA Society celebrating 10 years from its foundation.
